

Dates for the diary: art events in London May 2018 from learning how to make digital paintings to an art trail in the City of London

Bring Monet into the 21st century or re-visit Lowry's painting in Chelsea this May.

KATE GORDON | Friday 4 May 2018 14:13 BST | 0 comments

ART IN THE SQUARE MILE

Sculptor Nick Hornby and painter Sinta Tantra

Sculptor Nick Hornby and painter Sinta Tantra met at the Slade in the early 2000s. Both are best known for their site-specific work and installations in the public realm: Hornby for his sculpture commission at Glyndebourne last year, and Tantra, a British artist of Balinese descent, for her 2017 Folkestone Triennial painted building and a 330-yard painting at Canary Wharf.

Occasionally they collaborate. You can now follow a trail of their joint work across the City, from Finsbury Avenue Square through to 201 Bishopsgate, The Broadgate Tower and Exchange House. Tantra's colours are inspired by a sort of 18th-century Farrow & Ball, while Hornby's work references Picasso and Matisse.