

Sinta Tantra: Her Indonesian connection

Andreas D. Arditya, The Jakarta Post | Headlines | Sun, August 18 2013, 10:37 AM

(Courtesy of Sinta Tantra)

Headlines News

Importers, officials deny garlic cartel allegation

EU pulls punitive duties on Indonesia's biofuel

Industrial growth of 7 percent to sustain economy: Ministry

A British artist of Balinese descent Sinta Tantra is looking forward to do more works in Asia, especially Indonesia, as she juggles her time between London and Bali.

Born in New York to Balinese parents, who now reside in Bali, Sinta has been on the edge of the East and West and would like to stay in between them for the rest of her live.

"I'd love to alternately stay in Bali and London. Europe in the winter is really horrible; I want to avoid the winter altogether. I would like to be able to spend six months in Bali and six months there; traveling back and forth each year," said the artist, who attained her Master of Arts from the Being someone who treads the cultural borders of the East and West, Sinta said it had made her more adaptive.

"I become more open, not just to other cultures, but also people. It's really interesting that I'm now dipping my toe in Indonesia, making projects here while getting to know Indonesian culture and how the people work."