The arrival of fall sees Hong Kong's cultural scene heating up, and the art world is no exception. From a photography collection inspired by a past love affair to sculptures in search of inner peace, from large-scale political murals to Ming dynasty objets d'art, October's must-see art exhibitions indicate that the city has room for plenty of artistic diversity. Here are the 13 shows to put at the top of your list this month.

Flatland: A Romance of Many Dimensions, an epically titled solo exhibition, will showcase work by British-Indonesian artist Sinta Tantra. It is Hong Kong's first solo show of Tantra's vibrant geometric paintings, which explore dimensions through dramatic use of colour and shape. The exhibition is site-specific and blends with the gallery's space for a truly immersive experience.

When: Through 22 October 2016
